RESIDENTIAL MARKET OUTPACES CONTINUED DECLINES IN THE COMMERCIAL MARKET

The overall year-over-year, locally and non-locally assessed tax base increased 2.57%. Demand for existing residential single-family properties and condominiums resulted in an overall 4.55% increase to the residential assessments. The multi-family rental sector continued its decrease a further 1.11%. The office sector continued decreased another 10.28%. Overall, commercial values decreased 0.88%. This marks the fourteenth consecutive year that the City's overall assessed values have reported a net increase.

Residential Market Conditions

The City's residential market continued to rise despite variable mortgage interest rates. The available supply of housing for sale remained low. The average days on the market for 2024 sales was slightly shorter than in the prior three years. Properties that transferred typically produced assessment to sales price ratios below 100%, justifying the increases in assessments reported January 1, 2025. The City of Alexandria continues to be a desirable place to live with low unemployment, a significant number of high-paying jobs, and its prime location inside the Capital Beltway with five Metro stations.

For CY 2025, 83% of residential properties increased, 1% decreased, and 34% remained unchanged.

- As of January 1, 2025, the average value of existing residential property, including single-family and condominium is $729,925, an increase of 4.45% from the average value of $698,794 in CY 2024.
- The average single-family house for CY 2025 is assessed at $1,001,336, an increase of 4.06% from the average single-family value of $962,276 the previous year.
- The average CY 2025 residential condominium is assessed at $447,612, an increase of 5.63% from the average condominium value of $423,765 the previous year.

Commercial Market Conditions

Multi-family property values saw a further decrease from 2024. While multi-family rent increased and operating expenses remained steady, capitalization rates also increased. The decreasing existing multi-family market was offset by the construction of new properties. Most anticipated construction projects are still expected to advance during 2025, even though the pace of new construction remains slower than in years past due to increasing costs and continued difficulty obtaining loans.

Office property values further declined due to weak demand, typical vacancy at 18%, and the need for concessions. Several older Class B & C properties have plans to convert to residential uses. The hospitality sector saw increases in both the average daily room rates and occupancy which produced higher income, but business travel has recovered at a slower rate. Industrial and self-storage property values remained steady year-over-year.

REAL PROPERTY ASSESSMENT INFORMATION

Notices of Assessment are sent annually to all property owners in the City of Alexandria. The enclosed notice is our appraisal of the fair market value of your property as of January 1, 2025. Please review this assessment carefully to ensure your property data is correct and the assessed value is representative of comparable property sales in your neighborhood. In those neighborhoods with few sales, our appraisers relied on sales from similar neighborhoods. Only sales occurring prior to January 1, 2025 may be considered in arriving at the assessed value. To view the information used to assess your property, including the property sales in your market area, visit alexandriava.gov/RealEstate and select “Search Property & Sales Data.”

As required by state law, the City annually reassesses real property at 100% of fair market value. The enclosed Notice of Assessment is not a tax bill. The real property tax rate will be set by City Council on April 30, 2025, as part of the City’s FY 2026 budget process.

For additional information regarding review and appeal deadlines, please refer to the front of this page or to the information detailed within the Notice of 2025 Real Estate Assessment.
